This document is an English translation of the official Japanese version of the Nagoya University Academic Data Policy. In the event of any discrepancy, the Japanese version shall prevail.

Nagoya University Academic Data Policy

Approved by the Education and Research Council on October 20, 2020

(Purpose)

1. As established in its Academic Charter, Nagoya University's mission is to contribute to the well-being and happiness of humankind through research and education in all aspects of humanity, society, and nature. To this end, Nagoya University aspires to develop human welfare and culture and promote industry by accumulating intellectual achievements through academic activities in research and education and sharing them with society.

Based on this principle, this Policy establishes basic rules regarding the management, publication, and utilization of academic data at Nagoya University.

(Definition of Academic Data)

2. In this Policy, "academic data" refers to data collected or generated in the course of academic activities related to research and education at Nagoya University.

(Management of Academic Data)

3. The methods by which academic data is managed, published, and utilized may be decided by the person who collected or generated it, to the extent that those methods comply with laws and regulations,

Nagoya University Rules, and any other equivalent, and do not infringe on the rights and legal interests of others.

(Responsibilities of University Members)

4. Any member of Nagoya University who is engaged in research or education (hereinafter referred to as "University Member") shall appropriately manage and inasmuch as is possible, publish, and utilize academic data within the scope specified in the previous paragraph.

(Responsibilities of the University)

5. Nagoya University shall provide University Members with an environment that supports the management, publication, and utilization of academic data.